A Celebration of Conservation

by Jon Kohler

Each year, the Southeastern Wildlife Exposition (SEWE) draws thousands to Charleston, South Carolina, for an immersive experience in the sporting lifestyle, fine art and, most importantly, conservation. As Jon Kohler & Associates, we are honored to be part of this tradition, setting up in the heart of the Quail Village at Brittlebank Park alongside fellow conservationists, land stewards and outdoor enthusiasts.

SEWE is more than an event – it’s a gathering of like-minded individuals who share a deep respect for the land, wildlife and the traditions that define the sporting South. For those passionate about quail, bird dogs, upland hunting and sustainable land management, the Quail Village is the ultimate destination.

A Hub for Conservation and Upland Traditions

The Quail Village brings together some of the most dedicated organizations and brands in the upland and conservation community. Among our neighbors, you’ll find:

Quail Forever – Advocates for habitat conservation and upland hunting heritage.

Tom Beckbe – Outfitters of timeless sporting apparel.

The South Carolina Bobwhite Initiative – Committed to restoring wild bobwhite populations.

The South Carolina Prescribed Burn Council – Educating landowners on the ecological benefits of fire.

Quail Forever Wildlife Biologists – Experts in habitat management and conservation planning.

The Longleaf Alliance – Dedicated to preserving and expanding longleaf pine ecosystems.

OnX Hunt – Providing cutting-edge mapping tools for land and wildlife managers.

This collection of organizations and professionals fosters an environment where conservation and the sporting lifestyle go hand in hand. At Jon Kohler & Associates, our mission extends beyond land sales – we strive to match properties with future stewards who value habitat preservation, wildlife management and responsible landownership.

Why SEWE Matters to Land Stewards

The Southeast’s sporting heritage is rooted in a deep connection to the land. Whether you’re a quail hunter, landowner or conservationist, SEWE provides an opportunity to engage with those shaping the future of land stewardship.

Our job is to find the next great land stewards for our properties, and part of that is aligning with like-minded people and groups. SEWE’s conservation ethic and focus represent what our entire team stands for.

Beyond the Quail Village, SEWE offers a full weekend of excitement, from the high-flying action of Dock Dogs competitions to thrilling live animal demonstrations.

Attendees can also enjoy fine wildlife art, chef-led cooking demos and a vibrant nightlife scene with exclusive gatherings and social events throughout Charleston. There’s something for every outdoor enthusiast to experience and enjoy.

At the Quail Village, we looked forward to meeting with landowners, hunters and conservationists who share our passion for preserving the wild places that make upland traditions possible.

If you missed this year’s event, we encourage you to put SEWE on your calendar for next year and make it part of your annual tradition. Whether you’re looking to invest in a legacy property or simply want to talk bird dogs and habitat, we invite you to stop by, shake hands and join the conversation.

Join us at SEWE’s Quail Village next year – it’s where the future of conservation and ethical land stewardship takes flight.
